

Network of Experts

Evidence for Democracy's Network of Experts is a growing community of over 300 experts from dozens of disciplines. By sharing their knowledge and research they play a critical role in advancing evidence-based policy in Canada.

The Network helps to increase communication within and between the scientific community, public, policy makers, and the media to stimulate a national dialogue about the role and importance of evidence in smart decision-making and strong public policy development.

Evidence for Democracy helps the Network share their expertise and inform public policy in the following ways:

- Contribute to virtual panels to provide expert opinion on topical issues
- Write and publish letters to the editor and opinion editorials
- Connect with journalists covering science and public policy
- Engage in Evidence for Democracy's research projects
- Contribute quotes for press releases and public campaign materials
- Collaborate on original research projects
- Participate in Evidence for Democracy's informational initiatives

If you would like to contact a member of the Network of Experts for more information on a particular issue, please contact: Dr. Katie Gibbs, Executive Director, Evidence for Democracy (katie@evidencefordemocracy.ca)

If you would like to join the network, please complete this short registration form.